

Runout Period Changes

In a time of emergency or significant impact, you can change runout period settings on a benefit plan, even if it is mid-year or after the end of a plan year. If the runout period has not expired, it can be extended.

Why should you consider making a change?

The COVID-19 pandemic made it difficult for some participants to submit expenses for reimbursement or submit verification materials (i.e., receipts) before plan year end dates. By extending runout, participants have a chance to use their benefit dollars.

Things to Know:

- Changes to runout can influence finalization

When you change runout period for a plan, you will impact the date when finalization occurs.

- Changes must be requested at least two weeks prior to end of runout

Due to high demand for plan changes, TASC requires a two-week notice prior to the runout period end date in order to extend the Runout Period.

- Runout period may not be the same on all accounts

Runout is commonly used on many accounts but can be different for each one.
